LEUNG TOOK TRUNK TO NEWARK FRIEND

Chop Suey Man Did Not Have a Chinese place in Newark to a chop-suey Room to Store It.

tained Nothing but Clothes-Dates of Reported Movements in Jersey Town Contradict Other Stories.

New York, June 26.-The yellow and Interstate Commerce Commission white game of hide-and-go-seek, with the New York police on one side and Leung Lim on the other, went on to-day with no apparent abatement of energy, and with no greater success, at least in so Trailers Must Not Be Used After Sepfar as the detective bureau could say, than at any time since the murder of Elsie Sigel was committed.

To-day was the ninth day since Leung's uncle saw the stain under the door of the hall bedroom over his chop-suey restaurant at 782 Eighth avenue, and yet the Leung's eight-day start seems to have found him a hiding place.

A glimmer of light on what Leung did after the murder of Elsie Sigel came from Newark. Credence was given to the story at police headquarters, notwithstanding an inherent contradiction or hitherto. It purports to show what Leung did on the day of the murder and the day slender little Chinaman hailed him at Broad and Market streets in Newark early in the afternoon of Thursday, June dressed in American clothes, and that must be provided with four sand boxes. he wore a Masonic button in the lapel of his coat. He seemed to be badly scared at something.

The yellow man wanted to know how much he would charge to take him and streets northwest to maintain a headway a trunk to New York. They struck a of not more than two and one-quarter bargain, and Halstead drove to a Chinese chop-suey house at 64 Market street, kept 5 by Li Sing. The trunk, rounded on top and heavily roped, had such a load in it that Halstead had to get a Chinaman to help him down the stairs with it.

Your trunk's heavy as lead," he remarked to the Chinaman who had hired him. "What's in it?"

Nothing but Clothes, "Clothes; nothing but my clothes," the Chinaman was quick to answer. He did not seem to like being questioned, Halstead said.

They went across to Eighth avenue and then up to Forty-seventh or Forty-se and answers the description that Halstead gave pretty closely,

"We carried the trunk into the hallway," said Halstead. "I had a sore back. and said I wouldn't carry the heavy thing up stairs. The Chinaman tried to hire a negro, but he wouldn't take the job. Then he found another who would."

Spoke to Tall Chinaman. Halstead told the detectives that while he was waiting for his money his fare spoke to a tall, slim Chinaman, who chanced to be standing by. He adds that a policeman was near at hand, and that he stood looking up at the building when Halstead drove away.

Lieut. Miller, of the New York police department, who took a picture of Leung Lim out to Newark, showed it to Halstead. The cabman said it matched up with his recollection of his passenger.

A detective went around to see Li Sing, the keeper of the chop suey house in Newark. Li Sing said that he knew Leung well and that he had known Elsie Sigel and her cousin, Mabel Sigel. Leung had come to his restaurant on the morning of June 10 in a cab. He had a heavy trunk with him and he helped him to carry it upstairs. Leung wanted to leave it there, but Li Sing said he couldn't because he didn't have room enough. That was why Leung came with the cab and took the trunk away.

Other Reports Conflict. If the story is as well substantiated as the Newark police think it is, the telegram to Mrs. Sigel, which was sent from Washington by a Chinaman on the evening of June 9, has got to be accounted for. It is possible, the police think, that Leung may have gone to Washington and then come back to Newark Thursday morning, or else have had the telegram sent by some friend in order to allay the fears of the Sigel family. The theory upon which they seem to be working, however, is that Halstead was mixed in the day, and that in reality he took his fare from Newark to New York on Wednesday, June 9, and Leung was able to get away from here in time to catch a 3 o'clock train for Washington, reaching there in time to send his telegram at 8:30 o'clock. If the Newark episode did, as a matter of fact, happen June 9, then Chung Sin, the man who peeked through the hole in Leung's door on the day of the murder, has got to reconstruct his account and place the time of the murder two or three hours earlier. Nobody has turned up who remember anything in particular about a trunk going into 782 Eighth avenue the afternoon of June 10, nor would any one of the oc-cupants of the building where Leung had his room admit that he saw Leung that Masons Will Give Him Up.

Word has gone out to the Chinese Masons, the secret order with which Leung was connected, that they must give him up. Wong Sam Ack, the head of the fraternity, just now at El Paso, Tex., sent out dispatches to all of the branches that they must help to find Leung and bring him to justice. That puts Leung out of the refuge of his brotherhood. The police

Neither Miller nor Capt. Carey would admit that their com-panion was Halstead. They took him down into the property room, where the trunk in which Elsie Sigel's body was packed has been kept ever since the discovery of the murder. Capt.
